Hunt the Hazard!

Thank for you purchasing 'Hunt the Hazard!', a site sign developed to promote safety in construction to warn a younger audience of the dangers of playing on a construction site.

Hunt the Hazard!
Building sites are NOT places to play. There are a lot of dangerous things on sites which could hurt or injure you. This picture shows 16 examples of why you should never play on building sites. Can you find them all?
For further information and to explore an online version of this game, please visit www.ivorgoodsite.org.uk www.ivorgoodsite.org.uk

- The site sign is designed to be securely fastened to site hoarding or fencing.
  - When screwing the sign to hoarding, please use the images of the screw heads to guide you where the screws should go.
  - Alternatively, when displaying the sign on fencing, use a secure fastening product such as cable ties.
- 'Hunt the Hazard!' could be displayed alongside the Considerate Constructors Scheme's Site Registration poster(s) and other site signs for the general public.
- The sign would also suit being secured on a section of hoarding where there are viewing holes for the public.
- Please think about the safety of anyone who wishes to stand and look at the sign – be mindful not to place it on a section of hoarding or fencing where there is no pavement or where anyone interested would block access for others to pass on a busy street or road.

Ivor Goodsite is a promotional cartoon character, designed to act as a mascot for the UK construction industry. Ivor is available to attend appropriate industry related events, such as school or site visits, and the costume can be hired via the Considerate Constructors Scheme's administration office.

Approved by www.ccscheme.org.uk

Children's Safety Education Foundation

Further information can be found by visiting www.ivorgoodsite.org.uk